Fund update

The Russell Investments Global Shares Fund underperformed the benchmark in the December quarter. However, the Fund did deliver positive absolute returns over the period.

Contributing to the Fund's underperformance was poor stock selection in Japan; notably overweights to pharmaceutical company Nippon Shinyaku Co., engineering firm JGC Holdings Corp. and Hino Motors. Stock selection in Canada also weighed on returns. This included overweights to miner First Quantum Minerals and petroleum refineries company Suncor Energy; the former falling almost 70% over the period amid uncertainty surrounding the future of its key open pit copper mine project in Panama. Performance was further impacted by stock selection in emerging markets; notably overweights to Chinese names Kuaishou Technology, Alibaba Group and China Mengniu Dairy Co. All three stocks recorded sharp declines for the quarter. In contrast, the Fund benefited from strong stock selection in the US, including overweights to technology heavyweight Microsoft, ratings agency Moody's Corp. and Meta Platforms (formerly Facebook). Other US positions to add value were underweights to electric car maker Tesla, oil major Exxon Mobil and pharmaceutical company Pfizer. Stock selection in the UK also contributed positively to performance in the fourth quarter; notably underweights to healthcare company AstraZeneca, British American Tobacco and oil giant Shell. Overweights to private equity firm 3i Group and Land Securities Group – the UK's largest commercial property development and investment company – added further value over the period.

Note: The fund performance shown in this factsheet, effective from 1 December 2021, is not calculated using the unit prices for transacting into and out of the fund. The performance from this period has been calculated using adjusted unit prices. The unit prices calculated by the custodian use security prices available at NZ market close, while the benchmark is calculated using the security prices at the close of the different global markets. This pricing methodology difference causes an embedded lagging effect; hence a month-end adjustment is made so that the fund performance reporting is aligned with the benchmark methodology and we can more accurately report the fund performance against the benchmark. This methodology is effective from 1 December 2021 thereafter. Fund performance for periods up to 30 November 2021 has been calculated using the unit prices for transacting into and out of the fund.
